Description: F-010, 40-5440. The purpose of this project was to augment service for Spanish-speaking and bilingual users of local programs in the library. A partnership was formed with the coordinator of a pair of special Web sites (SOL and PLUS) which deal with distribution and sharing of materials and information among librarians serving the U.S. Spanish-speaking population. The Blanchard Library needed help with design of a Spanish language Web site of its own to address local service needs. The Library sought to test service strategies and connect itself with state and national efforts to enhance service to Spanish-speakers by partnering with the SOL site. The SOL Webmaster wished to improve the sites' appearance, navigability, content, and exposure to stimulate new patron use of the Internet both locally (using Blanchard as a test case) and globally. In addition to its Spanish language Web site, the library issued bilingual fliers, created an online bilingual photo gallery, and publicized the project in Spanish speaking media, among other activities intended to share tools and resources about linguistic issues of service. Training in Web access was provided by the library literacy program in English classes, a homework center, and a tutoring service.

Description: F-024, 40-5411. Grant funds supported equipment upgrade for a computer lab for underserved middle and high school students for after-school and weekend hours to do homework. The facility was also available for other library users. The focus of the project was Internet research and use of desktop publishing capabilities for reports, studies, presentations, and graphics. The lab was characterized as a "publishing center" for use by the students. Fifty training classes were offered during the grant year and averaged three-to-four daily for a total of 135. After-school and weekend use dropped off despite publicity and contact with schools. The project turned out to be more popular with adults than students, on balance.

Description: F-044, 40-5404. With partnering agencies, the library offered outreach services such as delivery of library materials to the homebound, assisted living centers, and nursing homes for underserved resident seniors with disabilities in a city with 24% population age 60 or over. An extensive plan for introducing modern adaptive technologies was formulated. This was one of a group of pilot libraries applying Outcomes-based measures of success, and they were well into it by the end of the grant year. Thirty-two homebound residents were enrolled in the project and 12 of those were new users who were encouraged to feel they were a part of the community by participating in a pattern of "normal" use of the library.

Description: F-060, 40-5422. This project aimed to provide a model of outreach services from the central library to small business community using publicity, direct service, and training workshops on subjects such as starting a business, e-commerce and Web site design, presentations, one-on-one training, access to online databases, and education in how to do business research in the library and online. A Web site was created. An extensive evaluation showed numerous indicators of success, from 60 outreach contacts connecting with 745 participants to 29 workshops that registered an average of 17 attendees. Two programs were delivered at California Library Association conferences in 2001 and 2002. Web site: www.sannet.gov/public-library/services/businesstech.shtml.

Description: F-067, 40-5435. San Jose Public Library has introduced an Innovative Branch Service Model program to transform its branches in order to respond to new service expectations of current patrons, embodied in features such as a bookstore environment and other "retail strategies," 24/7 access via technological means, greater self-service, more popular materials, increased convenience by extended hours and other electronic services, home delivery, user training, and a customer-centered staff culture. The project was intended to evaluate key elements and outcomes of this grand design. Findings included patron satisfaction with self-checkout and other related service features, satisfaction with longer operating hours though with reduced staff, better reference desk "approachability," and staff approval of the new service paradigm.

Description: F-097, 40-5428. This project presented an imaginative approach to develop a library-based gift shop that is "virtual," i.e., electronic and online rather than physical. The store was to be operated as a section of the library's Web site with links to commercial providers who offer affinity programs. This e-commerce approach would assemble several vendors' offerings, such as booksense.com. Through the project, the library was slated to receive a percentage of all sales referred to the vendor from the library Web site. Without setting up its own online store, the library sought an experimental new avenue for fundraising for its programs, Friends groups, and the library foundation. Due to unforeseen administrative circumstances the project could not be initiated during the grant period and had to be deferred.

Description: F-100, 40-5430. The intent of this project was to furnish a specially-configured computer workstation to the Knights of Columbus Foundation-sponsored Adaptive Computer Lab at the Recreational Center for the Handicapped (RCH, Inc.) in San Francisco, plus one station each in the San Francisco Public Library's main library's public computer area and in its computer training center. RCH participants gained networked access to SFPL's resources. Visitors to SFPL and people with disabilities are now able to access the SFPL online catalog and other electronic resources. The service, which included training of the disabled clients, sought to improve the lives of people with cognitive, developmental, or physical disabilities who can now use public library resources with computer equipment, ergonomic devices, software, and furniture that meets their special needs. Sixty-eight members of the target clientele group were served. RCH groups visited the SFPL on 36 occasions during the grant year. Twenty-one disabled users obtained library cards for the first time.

Description: F-113, 40-5512. This grant supported a project to expand an existing essay and art competition for high school students in the state, create programming around the contest, and set up two exhibits. The project was occasioned by the 60 th anniversary of the Japanese American relocation and internment during World War II. The grant extended work previously done on state funds. Several Japanese American historical societies were co-sponsors along with the library. Students were invited to express their understanding of the issues surrounding the internment and how these issues resonate today in the context of civil rights and racism. The September 11, 2001, terrorist tragedy in America helped increase understanding of cross cultural differences and rendered the library's role especially relevant.

LITERACY

Awarded FY 2002	State: California
Project Title: BALIT Publicity Enhancement

Description: F-050, 40-5418. The Bay Area Literacy Network (BALit) is a coalition of 25 library literacy programs that recently conducted a strategic planning process. One goal is increased awareness and visibility of literacy programs, emphasizing the need for a regional publicity effort in the SF Bay Area. Planning was completed for a major media event and conference on International Literacy Day. Entitled "Reading Rocks!", the event occurred Sept. 14, 2002, in San Leandro (CA) and was attended by 146 learners and tutors representing 15 of the area's literacy programs. The show included 25 individual programs' portable displays at an outdoor fair; and six workshops. The event was accompanied by updating of the BALit Web site for recurring communication and wide distribution of PR materials to all California Literacy Campaign programs. The materials created by the grant support filled a gap in marketing tools and have been successful in raising awareness of, and a sense of community among, the Bay area's literacy programs; reinforced collaboration and cooperation among them; and were showcased in a statewide literacy summit conference held in Sacramento in October 2002.

Description: F-055, 40-5414. This project was organized in the library to use volunteer tutors to provide intensive reading diagnostics and instruction to under-performing students in grades four – 12 of a neighboring school district and improve standardized test scores. One hundred forty-three students completed eight-week cycles of one-on-one reading instruction in four rounds of tutoring. Initial results on fifth and sixth grade participants indicated a 62.5% increase in scores as an outcome of the project.

Description: F-071, 40-5419. This was the second year of a project to conduct "health literacy" outreach training of rural and ethnic community learners, workplace literacy classes, and acquire (by Web search) or create informative materials on frequently requested topics in English, Spanish and Vietnamese, sited in a new community learning center in San Jose, which opened in May 2001. LSTA funding implemented an added site in Gilroy in April 2002 serving a predominantly rural population. Partners of the county library adult literacy program included a community health library and a medical center.

Description: F-076, 40-5421. The library sought to integrate four "Equipped for the Future (EFF)" principles and practices into a literacy computer lab (a.k.a. community learning center) which was supported by prior LSTA grants (1998/99, 1999/00). Highlight activities included peer learning teams (tutors and learners), learners orienting new learners, a "license" in computer literacy for learners, and a survey of inactive learners. Secondary objectives included dissemination of computer-based EFF activities and program strategies to other CLC programs and interested parties, training of literacy students to be lab users, and organization of a tutor training program.

LOCAL HISTORY, PRESERVATION, DIGITIZATION, AND CATALOG CONVERSION

Awarded FY 2002		State: California
Project Title: Albany Library Historical Photograph Digitization
Served: 503,400
Director: Linda Wood	Phone: (510) 745-1536
Library: Alameda County Library	E-mail: lwood@aclibrary.org
Address: 2450 Stevenson Blvd	Evaluation Type: Impact Study

Amount Awarded: $48,690	Check here if a statewide project
Description: F-001, 40-5402. This project preserved the Albany (CA) library's historical photograph collection and improved public awareness of and access to the collection. From a collection of 1,000 local history photos housed in the library, 601 photos were archivally scanned and digital images created. Seventy-three of these were previously uncataloged. The catalog records were mounted in the library's online catalog and digital images were attached using a commercial vendor's software. These records and images can be accessed through the online catalog and via the World Wide Web. A special Web "front page" allows users to search the photos by thumbnail image, subject, title, and key words. A brochure describing the project and collection was created. Two community events were held to publicize the materials; press releases and further events were planned at the time the grant year expired. Volunteers are helping to process further materials and citizens have stepped forward with personal collections to integrate into the library's holdings.

Description: F-003, 40-5400. "Digital Anaheim" created a primary source archive of 1,899 digital images of photos of local historical interest regarding subjects such as the founding of Anaheim, local geography, Native Americans, explorers, etc., from the library's History Room. The material was preserved, digitized, and cataloged to make it available on the library's online catalog and its Web site. The city school district collaborated to integrate use of the collection into K-12 school history curricula involving over 4,000 students and faculty as well as the public. Orientation and training were provided to faculty and library staff to encourage application of the system to classroom instruction and homework. A public reception to feature the archive was scheduled for October 2002 as part of the city's fall festival and the library's centennial year. The library is cooperating with the city's museum, historical society, and other municipal agencies to provide access to their data through the library Web site. Description: F-016, 40-5432. Four of the richest collections of local historical material were joined together to make Sacramento's (CA) past available on the medium of the future. The four institutional partners have long shared a mutual client base interested in their strong holdings in Sacramento County history dating from the mid-19th century. The cooperative project was organized to create a unified digital "virtual" collection of 1,000 images, a narrative history, a metadata database, and a Web site to provide access to primary source materials centered on the theme of the history of transportation in the county. The project set the scene for a growing "Sacramento History Online" Web resource that would incorporate additional themes as it is expanded. Further products included lesson plans and curricular resources to extend the results into the schools. The four institutional partners are: Sacramento Public Library, Sacramento Archives and Museum Collection Center, State Railroad Museum Library, and the State Library's California History Room. Each contributed 250 images. Web site: www.sachistoryonline.org.

Description: F-018, 40-5420. LSTA funds supported preservation and digitization of two collections of photos, field notes, audio recordings, and video film and tape of northern CA Native American oral, linguistic, and visual history. The first phase concentrated on works of six Native American elders chosen from these media. Results of processing were finding aids, metadata, images, indexing, and searchable text, made available via the library Web site, CD ROM, and other access tools. Specific achievements included a) transfer of 137 oral history (audio) tapes; b) transfer/restore 30 hours of videotape and film; and c) scanning and restoring 2,775 still photos. A rudimentary finding aid was created for 27 boxes of an anthropological field notes collection.

Description: F-087, 40-5425. This project, led by The Bancroft Library, created a digital thematic collection and electronic archive in multiple formats, documenting the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire in consultation with historian and author Philip Fradkin. The conversion incorporated primary sources of several cooperating libraries and archives, and the results were mounted in the California Digital Library's (CDL) Online Archive of California (OAC). Finding aids were placed in the OAC. About 5,000 images have been converted in Year 1; 3,000 pages of electronic text have been transcribed. Another 6,523 images were converted in Year 2 along with 3,403 added pages of text.

Description: F-104, 40-5518. This project was designed to provide access to a significant portion of the library's massive photo collection by cataloging its uncataloged materials and by increasing hours of operation to serve the public which seeks access to the collections. The photo collections encompass about 500,000 images covering the social, political, and cultural evolution of the state. A total of 158 collection level catalog records was created in the grant period. The subject matter ranges from the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, to the Chinese in California, to famous 19 th century photographers who documented the rise of the state. The data records are available in the University of California online union catalog. Finding aids to selected sub-collections are in progress. Library staff identified individual photos worthy of detailed cataloging in the future. Selections from the photo collections have been digitized for presentation on the library's Web site: www.californiahistoricalsociety.org .

Description: F-039, 40-5412. Metropolitan Cooperative Library System planned and organized over 300 programs having a wide variety, e.g., young adult author visits, study skills seminars, SAT prep courses, and many others in 31 jurisdictions, drawing upon a pool of authors who were on tap to take part in programming, and around whom each participant library could organize local events or workshops. Over 3,500 young adults attended. Library use by young adults was greatly increased. Most of the participant libraries will use local funds to finance future programs.

Amount Awarded: $81,220	Check here if a statewide project
Description: F-065, 40-5416. This was the second year of a project to train 200 public service librarians in the San Joaquin Valley area (two sessions were held on psychology of teens, two sessions on designing building space, two sessions on new service design, and two sessions on marketing) who work with young adult library users and non-users. The goal of creating model Young Adult "makeover" spaces in two of the libraries was met. Many of the libraries developed programming on their new services in cooperation with partner agencies. A manual was prepared.

Amount Awarded: $124,606	Check here if a statewide project

Description: F-082, 40-5427. This project implemented an unusual response to growing demand in the county for Internet and computer skills training for young adults and the public by recruiting 26 teens and 30 age 10-12 youngsters as volunteer trainers to conduct classes for 105 teens, 28 pre-teens, and 10 adults, drawing upon and adapting a well developed neighboring elementary school computer curriculum for use in the public library. The total attendance in a newsletter publishing task alone was 305. Seven schools in the county contributed both student learners and trainers. Library use increased in and for the library.

Address: 7400 E. Imperial Highway	Evaluation Type: Impact Study
City: Downey	State: CA	Zip Code: 90242
Amount Awarded: $53,141	Check here if a statewide project
Description: F-101, 40-5442. This project aimed to increase the effectiveness of the library's summer reading program by providing more individual staff attention to participating children and family members by use of interns. A secondary purpose was to provide mentoring and encouragement to undergraduate students with an interest in education or in working with children to consider children's librarianship as their careers. Fourteen student professional reading assistants worked in 15 branch libraries. The librarian mentors were trained in their roles and the students were given orientations and on-the-job training. The branch libraries reported significant increases in the number of children who sustained participation in the reading program over the preceding year. No data are available yet on the career decisions of the students.

ELECTRONIC NETWORKS

Awarded FY 2002	State: California
Project Title: Resource Sharing Consortium (INN-Reach)

Amount Awarded: $92,070	Check here if a statewide project

Description: F-007, 40-5431. Building on a series of developments supporting resource sharing, this effort expanded interlibrary and inter-computer system cooperation by acquiring a transparent network mechanism to link the holdings of participating public and academic libraries in four counties in the Golden Gateway Library Network (GGLN) (San Francisco Bay Area), add ability to place holds on selected materials, and implement a next day delivery system. The project enabled access to a total of 4.7 million records in the regional union catalog (Link+), using a commercial vendor's automated library system called INN-Reach. The project also increased annual interlibrary loan activity in participating libraries by an average of 40% and demonstrated capability to connect a library having another vendor's automation system to the GGLN INN-Reach online consortium catalog. The system offers direct placing of holds by patrons. A contract courier service provides next day delivery anywhere in the four-county consortium.
